Lake County contributed $126,931 in state automobile licenses according to statistics announced by Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson in his review for 1923 and this county stands fourteenth in the state in the number of autos in use. Cook county stands first with $3,230,180.

Two chicks were hatched from one egg in an incubator at Beloit, an unusual circumstance in the history of poultry. The incident occurred at the poultry farm of Andrew H. Schubert when a particularly large egg was placed in the incubator just to determine results. When the period of incubation drew to a close two chicks instead of one pecked their way through the shell.

There's a bread war on in Waukegan. The combatants are Chicagoans. The big firm that has sold bread in Waukegan for many years has been challenged by the Paul Brand company and Thursday the latter company had four trucks in Waukegan delivering free bread. They left a loaf of white and a loaf of rye bread at as many homes as four truckmen could visit. The new comers thus have issued a defy to the other big concern and as a result, there is a lot of free bread on the tables of Waukegan today.

More than 250 persons prominent in Masonry dined at the Masonic Temple Friday evening at 6:30 o'clock, the dinner being a part of the afternoon and evening ceremonies which marked the exemplification of the Royal Arch degree upon a class of 12 candidates.

Billboards and advertising placards on the right of way of Duane county highways must be removed by May 1. Caldwell's order to remove the outdoor advertising mediums there resulted from a campaign conducted by the Madison civic organizations against the billboards.

Watertown, Wis., businessmen and civic organizations are behind the movement for the erection of a five-story modern hotel in that city. The building will be so constructed that additional stories may be added if required later.

The Woodstock American has a story of a farmer who got a helper through a Chicago employment agency. The card from the agency called for wages of $55 a month, but the farmer made a bargain with the man at $35 a month. When the contract was completed the man was in Woodstock, broke, and consulted a young lawyer. Suit was started, and the farmer settled for $65. The laborer got $15 and the lawyer $60.

Game fish, the largest proportion of which are black bass, are being distributed in Illinois streams, rivers and lakes whose conditions as to natural feeding grounds, year-around depth and water rights permit their planting, according to State Game and Fish Warden Wm. J. Stratton.

The fish now being distributed, Mr. Stratton said, are the large type fish for breeding purposes, and weigh between two and four pounds. Public streams, lakes and country clubs where the public has access to the fishing grounds are the only locations considered by the state division of game and fish. More than 100 cars of various types have already been distributed, he added.

"Free settlements of English or ring-necked pheasants have been purchased by the state," the game superintendent said, "and parties interested in having settlements of those birds in their territory are asked to get in touch with this division."

20 Years Ago in Antioch

Work began on the foundation walls of the Webb and Thayer buildings on Monday of this week. The work will be pushed as rapidly as possible and when the building stands completed it will be quite an improvement on the one which was destroyed by fire last fall.

Henry Herman spent Tuesday in Chicago.

Sol LaPlant has been confined to the house for the past two or three weeks on account of blood poisoning in his arm.

Miss Laura Grimm has accepted a position at the telephone at Swan's drug store.

The Modern Woodmen of America is starting in the new year with a splendid record and promise to make the assertion that only eight assessments will be necessary to meet the death losses this year. No assessment will be levied for the month of April. This makes the second assessment skipped this year. Those who were skeptical for fear the Woodmen would not pull through under the new rating will have to admit that there is no sign of any unsoundness of this organization.

Jako Van Patten transacted business in Chicago Wednesday.

L. M. Hynes and family have returned from Wilkes, Wis., and are moving into their house on North Main street.

Charles Powles was out Monday after having been confined to the house for the past two or three weeks.

THIS THIEF DOESN'T LIKE HAMBURGER STEAK

Some time Wednesday evening some thief ransacked the icebox in the rear of the Ross restaurant taking twelve of Roeschle's best porterhouse steaks (adv.), one box of omelets, a pound of butter and a whole ham. The ham was already cooked and dressed all ready to eat. A platter of hamburger steak was not taken. But who's going to take hamburger when their is cooked ham and porterhouse steaks around.

P. T. A. AND BOY SCOUTS IN JOINT MEETING MONDAY

The joint meeting of the Parent-Teachers association and Boy Scouts brought out a large attendance. Mrs. M. Leiber gave a very interesting address on "Our Personal Responsibility as Citizens" and will not be forgotten by the audience privileged to hear her.

We know that after hearing Mr. Hutchinson's talk on the Boy Scout movement, that all parents will be eager to help the boy scout committee keep up this splendid organization.

The boy scout band showed wonderful improvement. Master Lasco, the smallest boy cornet player in the band, played two solos.

Too much praise cannot be given to Mr. Pollock for the wonderful achievement he is making for the boy scout organization.

The names of the candidates for the election of officers for next year were read as follows: Mrs. Keulman, president; Mrs. Hoffman, vice president; Mrs. Lester Osmond, recording secretary; Mrs. John Brogan, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Padini, treasurer; Mrs. John Woodhead chairman of the program committee, Mrs. McGee chairman of the publicity committee and Mrs. Frank King, Ways and Means committee.

Village Election Tuesday; No Oppositions on Ballot

The Village election takes place on next Tuesday. There is only one ticket in the field. Harry Isaacs lead the list under the People's Party to succeed himself as village clerk. The trustees are to be elected through the expiration of the terms William H. Osmond, Ray Webb and William Resing. The ticket lists the candidates for the vacancies as follows: William Osmond, Samuel E. Pollock, and Eugene O. Hawkins. Mrs. Leonella Stephenson is the candidate for treasurer. No candidate for magistrate appears on the list.

BASEBALL PRACTICE UNDER WAY AT HIGH SCHOOL

Some twenty-five candidates are practicing daily for places on the Antioch high school baseball team. The first game is scheduled for April 30, with Winconda being the opponents. The games this season will be played at the Antioch ball park on Lake street. Plans are being made to schedule about ten games for the props, five home and five travelling games. Positions have not yet been awarded, but the best prospects for pitchers are Casa and Walldwiler.

News Has New Salesman; Know Nothing About It

A sorrel-topped young salesman entered Antioch early Friday morning and started soliciting ads for a little film-flam hotel register card, with a tablet pasted on the center of the card to make it more attractive. He proceeded to sell the ads at $2.50 and $3.00 each, saying that The Antioch News was the originator of the scheme and that they would be the recipients of the profits.

Several sales were made and one of the merchants telephoned The News to have the wording on his ad changed. To the surprise of the News office the clever fraud was traced and the salesman, brought to the News office, where he gave a hard-luck story of being "broke" and thought the scheme with the help of The Antioch News' name would net him some easy money. The stranger agreed to call off the proposition and these that had signed for an ad notified that the card would not be printed.

The Antioch News wishes to inform the merchants and professional men of Antioch that they will not have any stranger solicit any propositions of any kind in which they have any connections, and to call up The News immediately if anyone tries their film-flam games.

Lake County to Get Large Shoe Factory

That an immense shoe factory, employing 2500 men, has decided to locate in Lake county, was learned following the purchase of a tract of one hundred acres of land at Rondout. The purchase of the land was made by Frank Goldberg of Chicago, acting for a big shoe factory now located at St. Louis.

While plans were being negotiated for the purchase of this large tract of land there was much speculation and mystery connected with the deal. Not until the transaction was closed and it was known definitely that the big concern was going to come here was the announcement made as to just what kind of a plant it was going to be.

While full details cannot be obtained at this time it is reported that building operations will be started in the very near future so that the big plant can be rushed to completion.

The location of such a large plant at Rondout, it is figured is bound to produce a boom there as living quarters will have to be provided for a big majority of the workmen.

Rumors from an apparently reliable source are persistent to the effect that the International Harvester company is buying large tracts of land at Rondout, selecting a point that is the junction of the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern, the St. Paul and the Northwestern railroads. The plan, according to the report, is to erect a large plant there as the railroad facilities are regarded as ideal.

BUSINESS CLUB TO HOLD BANQUET MONDAY NIGHT

Next Monday evening the Antioch Business Club will hold their first get-together dinner at Ross' restaurant. A Southern Rolled Dinner is to be served, and it is expected that a large number will attend. Speakers for the evening will be, Mr. Clifford, secretary of the Waukegan Chamber of Commerce; Lew Hendee, county clerk; and others.

Saturday Specials Bring Big Business Here

Antioch's Shops bargain page was a big success last week. A great number of the village people and those from outlying districts took advantage of the opportunities offered by the merchants to secure some real bargains.

The same opportunity is offered this week with a change in the menu. The thrifty housewife will do well to look this page over scrutinize each item. These bargains are offered by the merchants out of their regular stock. No slipshod or job lot articles are offered.

LAKE VILLA PLAYS HERE; LAST GAME OF SEASON

Lake Villa's basketball team will play the Antioch A. C. at the Antioch high school gym this evening (Thursday.) It will be the last game of the season for the local five. Antioch has played one game with Lake Villa and lost by a 33 to 30 score in an overtime period. In the preliminary game the Boy Scouts will play Nelson's All-Stars, champions of the high school teams. First game will start at 7:30.

Robert Stead.

The spirit of the West, especially of the prairies and foothills of western Canada, becomes a living thing through the medium of the pen of Robert Stead. He was born west of Winnipeg and for 30 years made his home on what is now a disappearing frontier. He served actively in farming, commercial and newspaper lines until called upon by the Canadian government to occupy a responsible position in its immigration and colonization work. While still in his teens he was writing poems inspired by the prairie life, the foothill trails, the limestone cliffs and the hardy settlers of the region, for the Canadian Magazine. These poems were collected in a volume and published under the title of "The Empire Builders." Other volumes of poems which appeared later were "Frontier-Born," "Songs of the Prairie," and "Kitchener and Other Poems." He has also written a number of interesting novels about the country, the better known titles being "The Ball Jumper," "The Cow Puncher," "The Homesteaders," "Neighbors," and "Zen of the Y.D." He visualizes the frontier, virile characters who conquer a wilderness and make it fruitful. His prose has the grace of diction and the beauty of sentiment to be expected from one who has excelled in poetical expression. His latest novel, "Zen of the Y.D.," is the fruit of a mature skill acting upon stirring incidents and characters of western life that have come, more or less, under his actual observation. Where so much of the milling nature and so much color existed, and where human types were ready at hand, it was only necessary for the author to employ his story-telling ability without drawing greatly upon his imagination. This tale differs slightly from the others in that he has chosen for his principal male figure a rather unusual man from the eastern part of the United States. The heroine is a typical girl of the plains.

CHAPTER I

"Chuck at the Y.D. tonight, and a bed under the shingles," shouted Transley, waving to the procession to be off.

Linder, foreman and head teamster, straightened up from the half load of new hay in which he had been awaiting the final word, tightened the lines, made a clucking sound in his throat, and the horses pressed their shoulders into the collars. Linder glanced back to see each wagon or implement take up the slack with a jerk like the curs of a freight train; the cushioned rumble of wagon wheels on the soft earth, and the noisy chatter of the steel teeth of the hay-rakes came up from the rear. Transley's "outfit" was under way.

Transley was a contractor; a master of men and of circumstances. Six weeks before, the suspension of a prairie order had left him high and dry, with a dozen men and as many teams on his hands and hired for the season. Transley galloped all that night into the foothills; when he returned next evening he had a contract with the Y.D. to cut all the hay from the ranch buildings to the Forks. Transley traded his dump scrapers for moving machines, and three days later his outfit was at work in the upper reaches of the Y.D.

The contract had been decidedly profitable. Not an hour of broken weather had interrupted the operations, and today, with two thousand tons of hay in stock, Transley was moving down to the headquarters of the Y.D. The trail lay along a broad valley, warded on either side by ranges of foothills; hills which in any other country would have been identified by the name of mountains. From their summits the gray-green up-filled limestone protruded, whipped clean of soil by the ebbings of centuries. Here and there on their northern slopes hung a beard of scrub timber; sharp gullies cut into their fastnesses to bring down the turbulent waters of their snows.

Some miles to the left of the trail lay the bed of the Y.D., fringed with poplar and cottonwood and occasional dark green splashes of spruce. Beyond the bed of the Y.D., beyond the foothills that looked down upon it, hung the mountains themselves, their giant crists pitched like mighty tents drooping phlegmately between earth and heaven. Now their four o'clock veil of blue-purple mist lay flamed about their shoulders; but later they would stand out in bold silhouette entailing into the twilight sky. Everywhere the silence of the eternal, broken only by the muffled noises of Transley's outfit trailing down to the Y.D.

Linder, foreman and head teamster, cushioned his shoulders against his half load of hay and contemplated the scene with amiable satisfaction. The hay fields of the foothills had been a pleasant change from the railway grades of the plains below. Men and horses had fattened and grown contented, and the foreman had reason to Transley's bank account.

"Do You Suppose Transley's Got a Notion That Way?"

confidential tone, "do you s'pose Transley's got a notion that way?" "Shouldn't wonder. Transley always knows what he's doing, and why Y.D. must be worth a million or so and the girl is all he's got to leave it to. Besides, no doubt she's well worth having on her own account."

"Well, I'm sorry for the boss," George retorted, with great soberness. "I allus hate to disappoint the boss."

"Huh!" said Linder. He knew George Drakz too well for further comment. After his unlimited pride in and devotion to his horse, George gave his heart unreservedly to woman-kind. He suffered from no cramping meanness in his devotions; that would have limited the play of his passion; to him all women were alike—or nearly so. And no number of rebuffs could convince George that his democratic affections. Such a conclusion was, to him, too absurd to be entertained, no matter how many experiences might support it. If opportunity offered he doubtless would propose to Y.D.'s daughter that very night—and get a boxed ear for his pains.

The Y.D. creek had crossed its valley, shouldering close against the base of the foothills to the right. Here the current had created a precipitous cut-bank, and to avoid it and the stream the trail wound over the side of the hill. As they crested a corner the silver ribbon of the Y.D. was unraveled before them; and half a dozen miles down its course the ranch buildings lay clustered in a grove of cottonwoods and evergreens. All the great valley lay warm and pulsating in a good or yellow sunshine; the very earth seemed amorous and content in the embrace of sun and sky. The majesty of the view seized even the unpoetic souls of Linder and Drakz, and because they had no other means of expression they swore vaguely and collapsed into silence.

Hoof-beats again sounded by the wagon side. It was Transley.

"Oh, here you are, Drakz. How long do you reckon it would take you to ride down to the Y.D. on that Pete-horse?" Transley was a leader of men.

Drakz's eyes sparkled at the subtle compliment to his horse. "I tell you, boss," he said, "if there's any jackrabbits in the road they'll get tramped on."

"I bet they will," said Transley, genially. "Well, you just slide down and tell Y.D. we're coming in. She's going to be later than I figured, but I can't hurry the work horses. You know that, Drakz."

"Sure I do, boss," said Drakz, springing into his saddle. "Just watch me lose myself in the dust." Then, to himself, "There's where I beat the boss to it."

The sun had fallen behind the mountains, the valley was filled with shadow, the afterglow, mauve and purple and copper, was playing far up the sky when Transley's outfit reached the Y.D. corral. George Drakz had opened the gate and waited beside it.

"Y.D. wants you an' Linder to eat with him at the house," he said as Transley halted beside him. "The rest of us eat in the bunkhouse." There was something strangely modest in Drakz's manner.

"Had yours handed to you already?" Linder managed to banter in a low voice as they swung through the gate.

"H—!" protested Mr. Drakz. "A fellow that ain't a boss or a foreman don't get a look-in. Never even seen her."

"Come, you Pete-horse!"

It was evident George had gone back to his first love.

The wagon drew up in the yard, and there was a fine jingle of harness as the teamsters quickly unlatched. Y.D. himself approached through the dusk; his large frame and confident bearing were unmistakable even in that group of confident, vigorous men.

"Glad to see you, Transley," he said cordially. "You done well out there. So, Linder! You made a good job of it. Come up to the house—I reckon the missus has supper waitin'." We'll find a room for you up there, too; it's different from bed'n' under canvas."

So saying, and turning the welfare of the men and the horses over to his foreman, the rancher led Transley and Linder along a path through a grove of cottonwoods, across a footbridge where from underneath came the babble of water, to "the house," marked by a yellow light which poured through the windows and lost itself in the shadow of the trees.

The nucleus of the house was the log cabin where Y.D. and his wife had lived in their first married years. With the passage of time additions had been built to every side which offered a point of contact, but the log cabin still remained the family center, and into it Transley and Linder were immediately admitted. The poplar floor had long since worn thin, save at the knots, and had been covered with edge-grained fir, but otherwise the cabin stood as it had for twenty years, the whitewashed logs glowing in the light of two bracket lamps and the reflections from a wood fire which burned merrily in the stove. The skins of a grizzly bear and a timber wolf lay on the floor, and two mouse heads looked down from opposite ends of the room. On the walls hung other trophies won by Y.D.'s rifle, along with hand-made bits of harness, lariats, and other insignia of the ranchman's trade.

The rancher took his guests' hats, and motioned each to a seat. "Mother," he said, directing his voice into an adjoining room, "here's the boys."

In a moment "Mother" appeared drying her hands. In her appearance were courage, resourcefulness, energy—fit mate for the man who had made the Y.D. known in every big cattle market of the country. As Linder's eye caught her and her husband in the same glance his mind involuntarily leapt to the suggestion of what the offspring of such a pair must be. The men of the cattle country have a proper appreciation of heredity.

"My wife—Mr. Transley, Mr. Linder," said the rancher, with a courtliness which sat strangely on his otherwise rough-and-ready speech. "I been tellin' her the fine job you boys has made in the hay fields, an' I reckon she's got a bite of supper waitin' you."

"Y.D. has been full of your praises," said the woman, as she led them into another room, where a table was set for five. Linder experienced a tingling happiness as he noted the number. Linder allowed himself no foolishness about women, but, as he sometimes sagely remarked to George Drakz, you never can tell what might happen. He shot a quick glance at Transley, but the contractor's face gave no sign. Even as he looked Linder thought what an able fella it was. Transley was not more than twenty-six, but forcefulness, assertion, ability, stood in every line of his clean-cut features. He was such a man as to capture at a blow the heart of old Y.D., perhaps of Y.D.'s daughter.

"Where's Zen?" demanded the rancher.

"She'll be here presently," his wife replied. "We don't have Mr. Transley and Mr. Linder every night, you know," she added, with a smile.

"Dollin' up," thought Linder. "Trust a woman never to miss a bet."

But at that moment a door opened, and the girl appeared. She did not burst upon them, as Linder had half expected; she slipped quietly and gracefully into their presence. She was dressed in black, in a costume which did not too much conceal the charm of her figure, and the nut-brown luster of her face and hair played against the sober background of her dress with an effect that was almost dazzling.

"My daughter, Zen," said Y.D. "Mr. Transley, Mr. Linder."

She shook hands frantically, first with Transley, then with Linder, as had been the order of the introduction. She gave the impression of one who has herself, and the situation, in hand.

"We're always glad to have guests at the Y.D.," she was saying. "We live so far from everywhere."

Linder thought that a strange peg on which to hang their welcome. But she was continuing:

"And you have been so successful, haven't you? You have made quite a hit with Dad."

"How about Dad's daughter?" asked Transley. Transley had a manner of direct and forceful action. These were his first words to her. Linder would not have dared be so precipitate.

"Perhaps," thought Linder to himself, as he turned the incident over in his mind, "perhaps that is why Transley is boss, and I'm just foreman."

The young woman's behavior seemed to support that conclusion. She did not answer Transley's question, but she gave no evidence of displeasure.

"You boys must be hungry," Y.D. was saying. "Pile in."

The rancher and his wife sat at the ends of the table; Transley on the side at Y.D.'s right; Linder at Transley's right. In the better light Linder noted Y.D.'s face. It was the face of a man of fifty, possibly sixty. Life in the open plays strange tricks with the appearance. Some men it ages before their time; others seem to tap a spring of perpetual youth. Save for the gray mustache and the packings about the eyes Y.D.'s was still a young man's face. Then, as the rancher turned his head, Linder noted a long scar, as of a burn, almost grown over in the right cheek.

Across the table from them sat the girl, partially dividing her position between the two.

A Chinese boy served soup, and the rancher set the example by "piling in" without formality. Then followed a huge joint of beef, from which Y.D. cut generous slices with swift and dexterous strokes of a meat knife, and the Chinese boy added the vegetables from a side table. As the meat disappeared the call of appetite became less insistent.

"She's been a great summer, ain't she?" said the rancher, laying down his knife and fork and lifting the carver. "Transley, some more meat? Pahaw, you ain't eat enough for a chicken. Linder! That's right, pass up your plate. Powerful dry, though. That's only a small bit; here's a better slice here. Dry summers generally mean open waters, but you can't never tell. Zen, how 'bout you? Old Y.D.'s been too long on the job to take chances. Mother? How much did you say, Transley? About two thousand tons? Not enough. Don't care if I do!"—Helping himself to another piece of beef.

"I think you'll find two thousand tons, good hay and good measurement," said Transley.

"I'm sure of it," rejoined his host, generously. "I'm carryin' more steers than usual, and I'll maybe run in a bunch of doggies from Manitoba to boot. I got to have more hay."

The Chinese boy served a pudding of some sort, and presently the meal was ended.

"She's been a dry summer—powerful dry," said the rancher, with a yalak show me where to get the hay."

"You know the South Y.D.?"

"Never been on it."

"Well, it's a branch of the Y.D. which runs southeast from the Forks. Guess it got its name from me, because I built my first cabin at the Forks. That was about the time you was on a milk diet, Transley, and us old-timers had all outdoors to play with. You see, the Y.D. is a cantankrous stream, like its godfather. At the Forks you'd nat'rally suppose is where two branches joined, an' jogged on henceforth in double harness. Well, that ain't it at all. This creek has modern ideas, an' at the Forks it divides itself into two, an' she hikes for the Gulf o' Mexico an' him for Hudson's bay. As I was sayin', I built my first cabin at the Forks—a sort o' peek-a-boo cabin it was, where the wolves usta come an' look in at nights. Well, I usta look out through the same holes. I had the advantage o' usin' language, an' I reckon we was about equal, scared. There was no wife or kid in those days."

The rancher paused, took a long draw on his pipe, and his eyes glowed with the light of old recollections.

"Well, as I was sayin'," he continued presently, "folks got to cabin' the stream the Y.D., after me. That's what you get for bein' first on the ground—a monument for ever an' ever. This bein' the main stream got the name proper, an' the other branch bein' smallest an' runnin' kind o' south nat'rally got called the South Y.D. I run stock in both valleys when I was at the Forks, but not much since I came down here. Well, there's maybe a thousand tons o' hay over in the South Y.D., an' you boys better trull over there tomorrow an' pitch into it—that is, if you're satisfied with the price I'm payin' you."

"The price is all right," said Transley, "and well hit the trail at sun-up. There'll be no trouble—no conflict of interests, I mean."

"Whose interests?" demanded the rancher, belligerently. "Ain't I the father of the Y.D.? Ain't the whole valley named for me? When it comes to interests—"

"Of course," Transley agreed, "but I just wanted to know how things stood in case we ran up against something."

"Quite proper," said Y.D., "quite proper. An' now the matter's under discussion, I'll jus' show you my hand. There's a fellow named Landon down the valley of the South Y.D. that's been thirtin' with that hay meadow for years, but he ain't got no claim to it. I was first on the ground an' I cut it whenever I feel like it an' I'm goin' to go on cuttin' it. If anybody comes out raisin' trouble, you just shoos 'em off, an' go on cuttin' that hay, spite o' h—! an' high water. Y.D.'ll stand behind you."

"Thanks," said Transley. "That's what I wanted to know."

COMMUNICATION

Editor, Antioch News,
Antioch, Illinois.
Dear Sir:

Referring to an article appearing in the March 6th issue of your publication, entitled, "What Do They Get? Ask the Milk Farmer", which article comments upon a statement printed in a recent issue of the Milk News, bearing on indemnity paid to farmers for cattle slaughtered on account of tuberculin infection, please permit me to state:

The figures contained in the January Milk News article which now appears to have been erroneous, were obtained from the September 1923 issue of the Kane County Farm News, which paper had previously borrowed them from still another farm periodical claiming to quote Dr. J. J. Litner, inspector in charge of tuberculosis eradication for the United States government.

As the subject under discussion is of serious importance to your farmer readers, and as the report printed in your paper like many of the statements constantly appearing in various farm publications is misleading, may I set your people right in the matter by quoting from a letter received from Dr. Litner, under date of Feb. 26th, 1924, as follows:

"Animals are appraised on merit as they stand; all interests involved are taken into consideration when making such appraisal. The federal department agrees to pay one-third of the difference between the appraised value and the salvage derived at the time of slaughter, but in no instance shall the amount paid by the federal department exceed $50.00 on any purebred or $25.00 on any grade animal. The state of Illinois will pay the same amount. Applying this fact, under no consideration can an owner receive over $100.00 and salvage on any purebred, or $50.00 and the salvage on any grade. Indemnity is paid as follows:

"The net salvage is subtracted from the appraised value and the result divided by three. If the amount given does not exceed that specified by law, as above stated, it will be the amount paid to the owner. Example, Grade animal appraised value $75.00, salvage $15.00; difference $60.00; government share $20.00, state share $20.00; owner received $55.00 for the animal. Example of purebred where the owner will not receive one third of the difference, but in accordance with the law: Appraised value $200.00; salvage $20.00, the difference is $180.00; one third of which is $60.00, but the maximum by law is only $50.00. I believe this is self explanatory."

The undersigned writer has made a close study of at least two sides of the many angled proposition facing the dairy farmer whose cows have not as yet been subjected to a tuberculin test. As it appears to many Chicago district milk producers, the fact that our product is thoroughly pasteurized before it reaches the consumer, practically eliminates all probability of the transmission of tuberculosis from cows to city humans through milk.

It is conceded that most Illinois farmers and their families use unpasteurized milk from untested cows and yet statistics show that people residing on farms or in country districts are practically free from the form of tuberculosis which can be traced to germs said to be transmitted in cow's milk. The propagandists who are hell-bent upon coaxing us to test our cows neglect to tell us that a goodly percent of the cattle condemned to the slaughter pen are found upon examination to be absolutely safe insofar as possible milk infection is concerned. Another vital fact which should be taken into consideration by the cow owner before submitting his herd to a tuberculin test, is the possible never ending financial loss which he must be prepared to assume. There is often a severe shock in store for the farmer who has accepted without protest the government appraisal figure of perhaps $100.00 each, or less on purebred animals for which he paid or has offered many times that amount, or an appraisal of $50.00 on the best milker in his herd; has shipped his stuff to the wards and sighs with relief to think the worst is over at last; when too soon along comes the second and third test and off go more cows and more cows.

I could cite instances by the dozen where herds have been declared free from the disease on third or fourth test only to have more infection and consequent loss appear later on.

Yes, I could relate how a farmer living in a neighboring state, whose herd has been declared free from the pest for years and whose county has been known as absolutely free from infection, has just recently been advised that he now has seventeen reactors in a total of thirty-six head. Where did it come from? Nobody knows. It is reported that my neighbor who has bragged of a federal accredited herd of registered Holsteins, recently shipped his old bull to the yards and was astonished upon receiving his returns to learn that the animal had been tanked as rotten with tuberculosis. The bull in question, though tested several times, has never to the owner's knowledge reacted.

At an Indiana gathering of dairy farmers a while back, at which a discussion of this all important matter took place, one man arose with tears trickling down his face and announced that he was no longer a farmer, for the reason that he had lost forty-two out of a herd of forty-four fine healthy looking Holsteins and had consequently been forced to the financial wall.

Both federal and state authorities concede that tuberculin infection is often derived from running streams of water from which cattle are permitted to drink and just to indicate how little common sense judgment is often shown by those well paid officials who want the job of testing our cows, a farm owner of moderate means was recently advised to test his cows, fence and bridge a stream which in spring freshet is a veritable river and furthermore to build a double line fence to prevent contamination from his neighbor's stock.

Of course no cattle owner would knowingly harbor a dangerously diseased animal among his healthy stock but until more substantial is offered to show that a healthy appearing, heavy milking cow, whose milk is pasteurized before marketing, is endangering the best interests of her owner and the community as well it seems a pity to put both her owner and the general tax paying public to the expense essential to her destruction.

If it were possible to isolate the tuberculous germ in milk and in such manner, spot the animals guilty of producing a food dangerous to human consumption, it is an easy venture that very few would be condemned.

One weak feature of the present system of our government attempt at eradication of tuberculosis in cattle, is the lack of provision for testing of steers as well as milk cows. Just why a steer feeder should be permitted to bring into the state or to his pasture from the Chicago yards a bunch of sickly looking steers without an empuratory test, is hard to understand.

It has been conclusively proven to the satisfaction of all concerned that steers have and can transmit the disease just as easily as can cows, so why not as well subject them to a test?

Sincerely,
C. M. Cleveland

Methodist Episcopal Church News

Do you believe in the Holy Catholic Church? I do. It is a very positive belief with me. And when I say it, I subscribe wholeheartedly to all that it implies. Let us look at its meaning. I am going to insist that you be honest, if you repeat it. This church must first of all be Holy. It was no accident that the successors to the old Judaism should believe in the Church of God as a Holy church. Their chief idea of God was that He was Holy. When Jesus tried to teach His love, they could hardly understand him, because the thought of His Holiness so completely filled their minds.

We shall be careful to affirm that in deciding what the church must be in this generation to be Holy, we shall not be able to follow too slavishly what any other age has held to be right for changes are always being made in our ideas of what is right. In the times of the apostles bishops were chosen by shuffling dice. In the early times of American history, a lot of people thought it was evil to have steeples on a church, or a fire or a carpet, or a cushion or a musical instrument inside of a church. I believe today, that the Holy Church will not be run by lotteries, nor by public dances, nor by beggary, but that people shall devoutly support the church, as loyally as they do their own family. I believe that every one of any color or creed or financial condition will be welcome. That in the ladies societies the poorest woman in the community will be invited, and made to feel welcome. This church will not be run by some clique, nor will it be afraid to state the truth, nor fear to oppose wrong, no matter who is hit. It will be filled with people who are like God in their ability to feel Love for all, and to serve all.

This Holy Church must also be Catholic. I will not budge a step on that word and all that it implies. Catholic means that it is a world-wide church with a mission to all—that its doors are open to all—that we believe that God is interested in all. The Holy Catholic Church will welcome any one who is trying to find God whether he is trying our way, or not, into all the services and benefits of the church. It will welcome all-comers to the Lord's table, whether they are immersed, sprinkled or neither, recognizing that it is the Lord's table, and not theirs. This Catholic Church will welcome the pastor of a different church into its pulpit whether he was ordained in this particular way or that, recognizing him on his own profession as a minister of God. This church will bury the dead from any family, not withholding spiritual help from any child of God because he has not been put thru some particular set of ropes. This church will admit to its membership any child of God who believes in God, and wants to find out more about Him, without demanding any further signs, or further subscription to this or that kind of a Creed. That means that the ritual of the Methodist Episcopal Church must be altered. It is only a matter of time till this will be done. When we took some members into the church recently, we did not ask if they believed in the Apostles' Creed, and probably we will never do that again. We will be consistent. We are trying to believe in the Holy Catholic church. We are trying to follow Jesus who said "Come unto me all that are weary and heavy-laden, and I will give you rest," and who-so-ever will, let him come and drink of the water of life freely."

I believe in the Holy Catholic church of the Living God, do you?

Maintenance and National Service

NATURE is both the ally and enemy of the telephone. One of her forces, electricity, carries the voice of man afar. Others, as flood, tornado or sleet storm, can cripple communications in a large area through their devastating might.

Each pair of telephone wires in the Bell System is a pathway for reciprocal speech. When beaten down by the uncontrollable forces of nature, that pathway to fifteen million telephones is blocked, and none of the nation's voices can pass that way.

Reserve materials must be on hand, that storm damage may be repaired without delay. Adequate funds must be made available so that the cost of restoration may be met.

National telephone service is only possible through an organization capable of handling, on a nation-wide basis, the problem of maintenance as well as of operation.

It takes just five boys or girls in a community to form a club of whatever kind they want. Good prizes are offered in addition to what special prizes the Fair Association will give. You will note the attached blank form which should be signed and mailed in before the meeting April 11th.

Briefly as to the Calf clubs, age limit is 10 to 20 years and calves are to be shown at the county fair, reports of the work made records kept. There is a possibility of a sale being held of the Guernsey calves at the end of the season. Further details at the meeting.

MAY MAKE MILK FROM KEROSENE IS THEORY
Striking predictions of the development of the world's natural resources through science and engineering were made in a speech before the joint convention in Chicago at the Hotel Sherman of the Illinois Gas Illinois State Electric and Illinois Electric Railway, editor of the Gas Age Record.

Some of his predictions were the probability of making milk from kerosene; the abolition of steam-driven power plants in favor of gas; the development of research in vacuum for the secrets of the sun's catalytic action on growing plants, enabling man to solidify, ready for use, the energy from the rays of the sun.

Otis Skinner at Powers' Theatre, Chicago

Of unusual interest to those who care for the better things of the stage is the announcement that Otis Skinner will appear at Powers Theater, Chicago, in Melchior Lengyel's satirical comedy, "Sancho Panza," adapted from Miguel de Cervantes, famous story, "Don Quixote de la Mancha." Mr. Skinner is appearing at Powers theater, direct from the Hudson theater, New York, for a limited engagement that shared with him the honors of the New York engagement appearing in Chicago.

"Sancho Panza" is an elaborate production, rich in color and movement, with singing and dancing and effective groupings of more than fifty players. It has been staged by Richard Boleslawsky, of the Moscow Art Theater. The special music has been composed by Hugo Felix, well known for his "Pom-Pom," "Lasso," and "Marjolaine." The dances have been arranged by Bert Froeh, of the New York "Musie Box Revue," and the entire production costumed by James Reynolds, costume designer for the Ziegfeld "Follies."

Russell Janney, producer of "Sancho Panza," has endeavored to maintain the spirit of Cervantes' "Don Quixote," so that those who are familiar with the famous Don and his encounter with the windmills may not be disappointed in the transferring of the atmosphere from the book to the stage. Even Sancho Panza's famous donkey, "Dapple," has not been overlooked. In fact, he shares honors with Mr. Skinner.

During the "Sancho Panza" engagement at Powers Theater there will be matinees, on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

"I was only acting the part of a peacemaker," exclaimed a prisoner. "But you knocked the man senseless!" said the magistrate.

"I did," was the answer. "There was no other way to get peace."

A WARNING TO BEGINNERS

The production of eggs increased 33.3 per cent from 1920 to 1923, whereas the population of this country increased only 5.3 per cent. The export trade is negligible and the imports from China have dropped off only 12 per cent. We may expect to receive eggs in large quantities from China during 1924.

In view of the above and that there 50,000,000 chickens more on the farms than a year ago, the situation clearly indicates an increase in production of both poultry and eggs in 1924. There is however, a shortage of cold storage stock, and what ever increase there may be will perhaps be absorbed by the market.

However producers should consider carefully the results of an expansion of poultry production.

THE POTATO

The potato is the most popular cultivated food in the world. It is related to the pepper and tomato. Europe grows ninety per cent of the world's production and Germany grows 39 per cent of Europe's production. America is also a leading country. New York, Michigan, Wisconsin and Maine are the leading states in America.

The potato contains four fifths water and one fifth starch. One hundred pounds of potatoes will make from ten to twenty-four pounds of starch. The potato is also used in making potato flour. From four to six pounds of potatoes will make one pound of potato flour. Potato flour mixed with wheat flour makes better bread. Potatoes are used in making alcohol. One hundred pounds of potatoes will make one and one fourth gallons of alcohol.

The potato plants does not form potatoes until it has blossomed. Some of the best varieties for this country are the Early Ohio, Rural New Yorker and Triumph. A good rotation for planting potatoes is: Potatoes, oats, clover and pasture.

Plant the potatoes about three to four inches deep and from twelve to sixteen inches apart in the row. The rows should be about thirty-two inches apart. The use of fertilizer is a great help for a better crop. A light application is from two hundred to three hundred and fifty pounds. A heavy application is from five hundred to one thousand pounds per acre.

It is a good plan to soak your seed in formaldehyde. This is made with one pound formalin and thirty gallons of water. The early blight effects the potato the worst in a dry year. This can be controlled by Bordeaux Mixture. Late blight is also controlled in the same way.

The potato beetle is controlled by spraying with arsenate of lead. The black and green aphids is controlled by spraying with nicotine sulphate. This is made with three-fourth of a pint of nicotine sulphate with fifty gallons of water. Fall plowing and rotation of crops will also destroy insects and diseases.

The potatoes should be cultivated and kept clean during the growing season. In large fields they use potato diggers to harvest the potatoes, but in a small patch a fork is used.

In storing potatoes put them in a cool dry place. Do not save seed for the next year that has been effected by any disease.

OBITUARY

John Mills Orvis, the eldest son of Charles and Bortha Orvis was born at the old homestead near Camp Lake, Wis., on Jan. 5, 1858. He received his early education at the Camp Lake district school afterwards graduating from the Whitewater normal. He was a successful teacher in the county schools for several years.

At different times he served the people faithfully holding office of trust. For a number of years in partnership with his cousin Walker Curtis he owned and conducted a general store where Fred Schreck is now located.

About twenty-seven years ago he was forced to sell and moved west on account of his wife's health. They located at Helena, Montana for a short time, later going to Missoula, Mont., where he bought and conducted a music store. A little over a year ago he met with an auto accident and he was brought to Chicago where he might receive the best medical aid.

During the year he submitted to thirteen operations. Two weeks ago he was reported as on the gain and in a few days he suffered a relapse and passed away Thursday, April 3, at six o'clock. In the fall Mrs. Orvis came and remained with him until his death. On Sunday she accompanied the remains to their home at Missoula, where services will be held with interment in a Missoula cemetery.

The passing of John Orvis came as a personal sorrow to his many friends throughout this county. On March 17, 1887, he was married to Miss Margaret Clowes at Fairfield, Wis. To this union three children were born: Mrs. Ethel Reinard, Spokane, Washington, Mrs. Helen Arndt, Wyoming, and John of Missoula. He also leaves two sisters and four brothers. Mrs. Adelaide Cooper, Waterford, Wis., Miss Flora Orvis, at the old home, Seymour, Montana, Harry at Camp Lake and Justin at Chicago. His many friends join in extending sympathy to the bereaved family, sisters and brothers.

Investigation Is Lake Villa
Started of Retail Price of Milk
Man to Patrol Route No. 21

Investigators for the city council high cost commission started Monday on an inquiry to determine whether a reduction in present retail price of milk in Chicago is warranted. Alderman Joseph H. Smith, chairman of the commission, announced.

Recent reductions at Minneapolis and St. Paul, where a cut to 10 cents was announced last week caused Alderman Smith to believe that a thorough investigation of the Chicago market and that of other cities might show that a slash in price should be forthcoming here.

Milk dealers of Chicago, however, assert that 14 cents a quart gives them only a small margin of profits. Costs of handling and distribution are greater here than in the Twin Cities, according to them.

For the six months, including April milk producers of the Twin Cities and Chicago received the following prices per hundredweight:

	Twin Cities	Chicago
October	$2.60	$2.75
November	2.50	2.75
December	2.50	2.75
January	2.45	2.67½
February	2.41	2.67½
March	2.41	2.67½
April	2.20	2.50

During October, when farmers in the vicinity of the Twin Cities were receiving $2.60, retail patrons were getting their milk for 11 and 12 cents a quart, as compared with 14 cents paid in Chicago. These prices continued in effect until the first of this month.

Chicago dealers point out that their wagon drivers and milk handlers—both organized—are higher paid than those of Minneapolis. Wagon drivers here are paid a guarantee of $11.50 a week and a commission of one-tenth of a cent for each quart of milk delivered in excess of the base—1,323 pints or quarts.

Drivers in Minneapolis are guaranteed $35 a week, but commissions on sales bring their average wage to about $175 a month.

The contract of the Chicago milk wagon drivers expires May 1 and their representatives have already notified the dealers of an intention to demand more money. Just what the drivers will ask has not been made public.

Labor costs, the Chicago dealers assert, are one of the big factors in the retail price of milk in Chicago.

"Divorce" at
Crystal Theater
Sunday Night

"Every woman with a love for home and family in her heart, should work with all her strength to assist in stamping out this great hydra-headed monster, Divorce."

The Bible says, "What God hath joined together, let no man put asunder."

If we stop to think how little attention is paid to this great sacred law, we cannot help but be horrified.

"Marriage is the most sacred thing in the world. It is the union of souls. Our law divorce laws make the marriage anything but sacred. More often they make it a travesty."

"I do not accuse the man of being always responsible for a legal separation. I regret to say it, but the woman is equally guilty. One great cause of the constantly increasing number of divorces filed each week is 'the other woman.' This other woman is more often a single girl who probably started her affair with the married man with a bit of harmless flirtation that later ended in the divorce courts."

"In the many divorce trials I have attended in Los Angeles and San Francisco, I notice the other woman in the case is often the baby doll type of vampire, and not the traditional, tall, sinewy, dark type of woman who wear the clinging garments while assuming the vampire pose with a fan."

The dangerous vampire is the pretty, vacant-faced woman who looks up into a married man's face and says 'I just think you're grand.' The baby-faced vampire is really one of the great causes of our constantly growing divorce evil."

"The motion picture is the greatest modern teacher and it can do us a world of good in helping to stamp out the greatest curse of civilization."

Mrs. Clemmer, as well as the Anti-Divorce League, has heartily endorsed Chester Bennett's production of "Divorce," starring Jane Novak. "Divorce" will be shown at the Crystal Theater one night only, next Sunday.

Raymond Walsh of Lake Villa has been appointed maintenance patrolman for the Antioch section of route 21. His patrol runs as far south as Rollins and Grand avenue from Garrettsville to Lake Villa, and then west to the Fox Lake road, and south on the completed stretch of cement road.

Mr. Walsh has already done some work on the dirt stretch north of town and will try and keep this section in fair shape. A little work on the open stretch at Lake Villa has put it in fair shape. This was done by George McCredie, Lake Villa commissioner. It is hoped that this road will be kept after, as it will relieve heavy use this summer.

All of this road is not accepted by the state as yet, but will be eventually. The parts accepted and being taken care of are about ½ mile north of Antioch and the old portion of Grand avenue, near Sand Lake, also that part of route 21 between Lake Villa and Rollins. It is the plan of the state to seed down all of the shoulders and are to be kept mowed. It is the idea of the State Highway department to make the roadside as attractive as possible. All advertising with the exception of auction bills, fair bills and political matter, rubbish, etc., is kept off, and if the public will refrain from making the highway a dumping place it will help the patrolman.

Frank Sheets
Appointed Chief
Highway Engineer

Governor Len Small and Col. C. R. Miller, Director of the Department of Public Works and Buildings, made public announcement of the appointment of Frank T. Sheets as Chief Highway Engineer in the State Division of Highways to succeed Clifford Older who resigned recently to enter consulting engineering work.

For the past three years Mr. Sheets has been Superintendent of Highways and recently tendered his resignation to the Governor to take the position of Chief Highway Engineer.

Mr. Sheets has been in Illinois State highway work since 1907 with the exception of the time spent in securing his engineering education at the University of Illinois. Prior to his appointment as Superintendent of Highways by Governor Small, he served in various engineering positions in the Division of Highways, among them being Assistant Maintenance Engineer, Bridge Engineer, and Engineer of Design. He is a graduate of the Civil Engineering School at the University of Illinois. His thorough technical training, and his extended experience in all phases of highway engineering have made him eminently qualified for the new position to which he has been promoted.

Mr. Sheets is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Illinois Society of Engineers, the Springfield Engineers' Club, and of the honorary engineering and scientific societies, Tau Beta Pi, Sigma Xi, and Triangle. He is also president of the Mississippi Valley Conference of State Highway Officials, treasurer of the American Association of State Highway Officials, and an Optimist.

Mr. Sheets will, in addition to his duties as Chief Highway Engineer, perform temporarily the duties of Superintendent of Highways.

First Lawyer—I got even with that fellow who black-balled me at the club.

Second Lawyer—How?

First—His wife came to see me about divorcing him, and I praised him up so highly she's decided to stick to him.

Tom and Bill were late for school, and were called to account for it. "What made you late Bill?" asked the teacher.

"I was dreaming I was going to California, and I thought the school bell was the steamboat I was going on," answered Bill.

"You did?" said the teacher. "And now Tom (turning to the second boy) 'What have you to say for yourself?'"

"I—I was just waiting to see Bill off."

An old man approached the ticket wagon on the circus grounds and asked for three seats for the afternoon performance. "Sorry, but we're sold out," the ticket seller told him.

"Well," opined the old man with acerbity, "I call that pretty poor management."

"Why do so many actors insist on playing Shakespeare?"

LOS ANGELES IN SECOND PLACE

Los Angeles passed in to second place as the greatest consumer of milk recently. Boston, Mass., is the leader in the United States. The ability to increase milk consumption by advertising is clearly shown by both cases. In New England the farmer and dealers jointly support a well-organized publicity bureau.
